Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Sunday 06 Jun 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Fine in north today, rain or showers likely further south.

Today:
Scotland, Northern Ireland and parts of northwest England and northwest Wales should be fairly bright, just an isolated shower. Further south, some bright warm weather but some patchy rain early on, with a few heavy showers and thunderstorms by afternoon.

Tonight:
Showers in parts of England may be slow to die out, although most areas should turn dry beyond midnight, perhaps with fog patches. Cooler with clear spells in northern UK.

Monday:
Many western and northern areas dry with some warm sunshine. Central and eastern England seeing some sunny intervals, but humid, with showers developing, heavy and thundery in places by afternoon.

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Often fine and warm for southern and eastern areas, though cooler/cloudier near some coasts. Rain at times elsewhere, most persistent across western coasts and hills.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.